Abortion pill-robots seized in Belfast

BELFAST – the Northern Irish capital Belfast, police Thursday short shrift with a action of Women on Waves. The Dutch action group had two robots abortuspillen give out to women outside of a courthouse stood. The robots are seized.

According to Rebecca Gomperts, founder of Women on Waves, the action is not illegal, because the robots from the Netherlands were governed. She says that three women the pills are swallowed.

Northern Ireland (part of the United Kingdom) has strict anti-abortusregels. It is allowed only if the woman’s life is at stake, and illegal abortion is life imprisonment. Since the neighbouring country of Ireland last Friday in a referendum for the legalization of zwangerschapsafbreking agreed, also in Northern Ireland votes on the policy to relax the.
